Ideal for restaurants, event spaces, or large dining areas, it commands attention while inviting connection.

ESPINITA

The Espinita table comes from a tree called pochote, unmistakable in Costa Rica for its trunk covered in sharp spines that protect it and set it apart in the landscape. Its wood is notoriously difficult to source and to work with, which makes every piece rare and exceptional. Espinita is the result of a beautiful coincidence: a single slab of pochote came into our hands, allowing us to transform it into a practical, functional design with proportions perfect for apartments — and truly one of a kind. mesa pochote

LEONA

Leona is made from Costa Rican Ron Ron, also known as tiger wood, a rare and incredibly dense hardwood that's hard to find and even harder to work with — but the result is worth it. The wood has warm golden tones with dark lines and cracks that give it real character.

It's the only table we've ever made with this wood, which makes Leona truly one of a kind. Its smaller size makes it ideal for more compact spaces, comfortably seating four people without losing its sculptural presence. The black resin down the middle adds contrast and gives the piece a bit of edge. Simple, strong, and full of personality — just like the wood she comes from.
